Congratulations to Sagaponack residents Jimmy Fallon and Nancy Juvonen! The couple announced the arrival of their second child, Frances Cole Fallon. She joins big sister Winnie Rose Fallon, who was born in July 2013. The Tonight Show host was able to keep his bundle of joy a secret until now because, like her sister, Franny was carried by a surrogate mother. Tonight Show tapings were canceled for three days while Fallon enjoyed time with his new bundle of joy.

And congrats to Hamptonite Scarlett Johansson! After the popular actress wore what appeared to be a wedding band to several events, reports were confirmed that she married Romain Dauriac in a secret Montana wedding in October. The newlyweds are parents to daughter Rose, born in September.

Amagansett's Chris Martin joined Bruce Springsteen for an unexpected performance in Times Square last Monday, World AIDS Day. The world-renowned musicians filled in for U2's Bono, who suffered injuries in a Central Park bike crash days earlier.

Bridgehampton's Madonna is the new face of Donatella Versace's spring/summer 2015 collection. The pop superstar posed for a print advertising campaign that will appear in Vanity Fair and Vogue magazines.

The trailer for the long-anticipated Jurassic World, executive produced by East Hampton's Steven Spielberg, was released on Thanksgiving. The film, starring Chris Pratt, B.D. Wong, Bryce Dallas Howard and Judy Greer, takes place in the dinosaur-themed amusement park envisioned by character John Hammond in the franchise's first installment. Jurassic World opens in theaters on June 12, 2015.

On her talk show last week, Southampton foodie Rachael Ray presented fellow South Forker Beth Ostrosky Stern with a check for $500,000. The funds will be donated to two of Stern's biggest passions, the North Shore Animal League and Bianca's Furry Friends. The donation coincides with the release of Stern's new book, Yoda: The Story of a Cat and His Kittens.

The Familiar, Unspoken Conversation Between Motorists and Pedestrians

BY DAN RATTINER

We all know the new rules regarding Main Street pedestrian crossings. They went into effect about five years ago. STOP FOR PEDESTRIANS IN CROSSWALKS.

What we all also know, but never talk about, is the unspoken conversation that occurs between pedestrians and motorists. Here, for the first time, is that conversation. You read it first in Dan's Papers.

Pedestrian (on curb): Hmm. It's just that pickup truck down at the end coming toward me. How fast is he going, anyway? I think that's over the speed limit.

Motorist: Don't step off the curb, don't step off the curb.

Pedestrian (stepping off curb): I wonder if he will slow down.

Motorist: Sonofabitch.

Pedestrian (standing, sizing things up): Is he slowing down? That's not a woman in there who'd drive like that.

Motorist: Maybe he'll bend over and tie his shoe or something.

Pedestrian: Well, I have the right of way. All I want to do is cross the street.

Motorist: This is an adult, full grown and full of years. It's not like he's a little kid who has his whole life in front of him.

Pedestrian (taking one step, then a second step): He's not slowing down. He's making it a race. Doesn't he know the law?

Motorist: He's not out of the gutter yet. I think I can make it. Maybe if I speed up he'll get the message.

Pedestrian (taking a third step): He's not stopping. Where are the police? Where are they? This man is breaking the law.

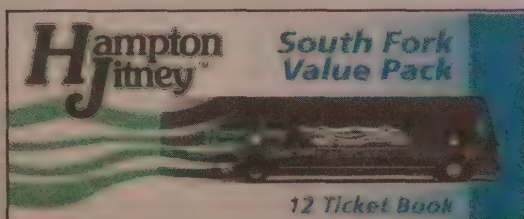

Motorist: Okay, okay. I'm coming to a halt.

Pedestrian (striding forward): He's stopping. Or trying to. What if his brakes fail? I'm going to be damned sure not to step in front of that truck until he is at a complete stop.

Motorist: Hurry it up, buddy.

Pedestrian: Good. I'm not going to be hit. I'll just walk in front of him now. Don't hit me, don't hit me.

Motorist: What's wrong with this guy?

Pedestrian: Maybe he's got somewhere important to go. I'll pick up the pace.

Motorist: That's better.

Pedestrian: Wonder who this is? (Looks up.)

Motorist: What are you looking at me for? Hurry it up.

Pedestrian: What's he angry about? It's a beautiful day. The sun is shining. The birds are chirping.

Motorist: For Christ's sake.

Pedestrian (waving and bowing head slightly): Thanks for not running me over.

Motorist (arm out window, a little wave): You're welcome.

Pedestrian (reaching the other side):

If these crosswalks could talk...

Well, that was close. I thought there for a minute...2,000 tons of steel.

Motorist (heading off): Now look at this. The light down the street just turned red.

Pedestrian (stepping up onto curb): Now, where was I? Why did I come over here on the other side of the street?

Motorist (arriving at light and coming to a stop): Wouldn't you know it, more pedestrians.

Can you believe it? What's this town coming to? Okay, everybody, move it along, this is no time to have a party in the middle of the street. Keep the flow going. Better not be dawdling along when the light turns green. You! Get a move on.

Second Pedestrian: Who? Me? You talking to me?

First Pedestrian: Gosh, that truck had to stop at the light. Was that my fault?

Motorist: You lookin' at me?

Second Pedestrian: Go ahead. Kill me. I dare ya. I double dare ya.

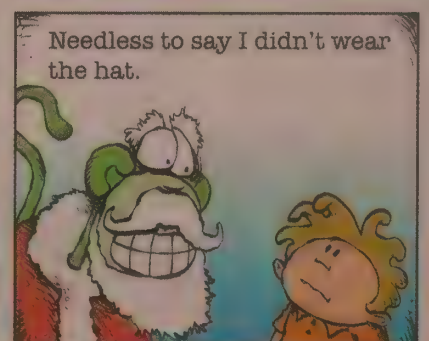

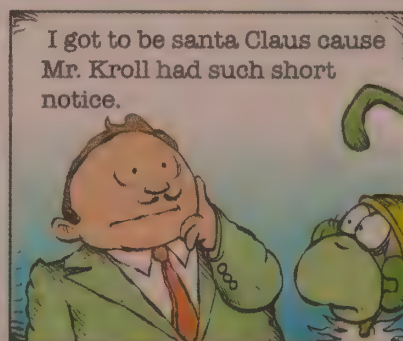

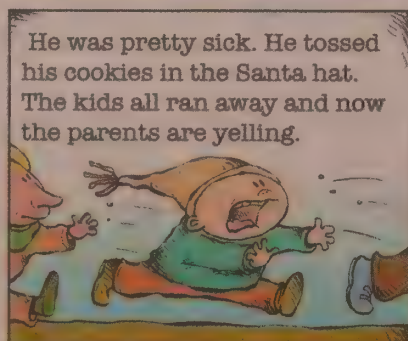

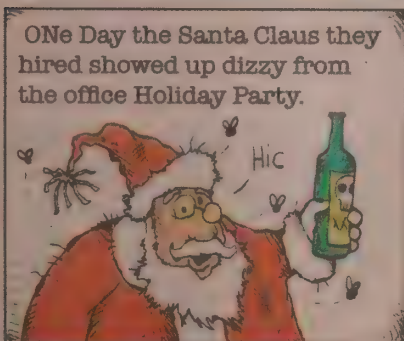

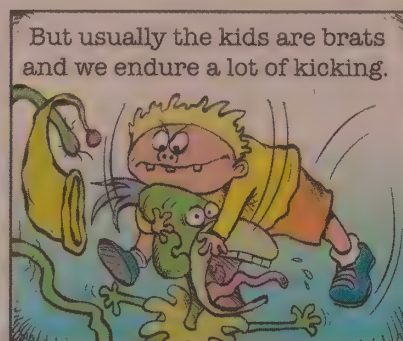

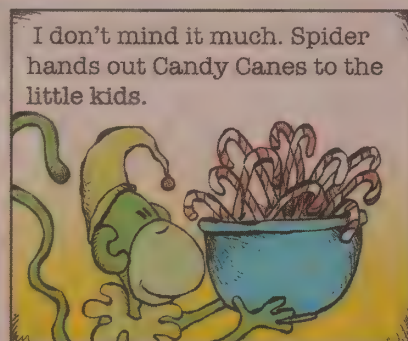

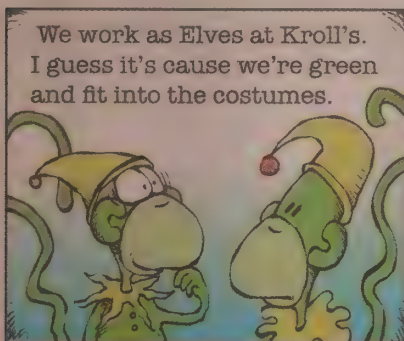

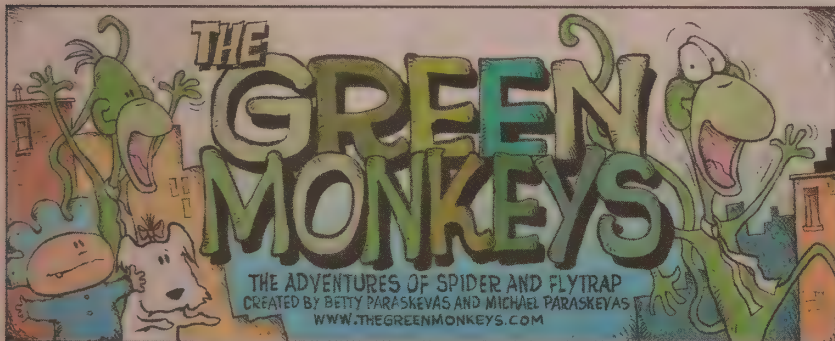

Woman with Dog: I wonder if that guy in the truck is checking me out. Men.

Second Pedestrian (looking at light, which has turned green): Uh oh.

Motorist: Who is that cute babe with the dog?

Motorist Behind Motorist: HONK!

Woman with Dog: Hey, sailor! 🍷

Light Up

Many Up-Islanders Come Out to Watch Montauk Lighthouse Turn On

BY DAN RATTINER

This is the time of year that people go out in sub-freezing weather to stand around in large groups, singing songs and lighting up evergreen trees and other seasonal and historic objects with Christmas lights. Sometimes they go out in groups of 100. Sometimes 1,000. And sometimes even more than 1,000, if for example the object in question is the Montauk Lighthouse.

I think many of us who live here take the Lighthouse for granted and are not necessarily attracted to the lighting of the Lighthouse as an event. Go out there. You can see all the way to the horizon in three directions. Yes, it takes your breath away. So what?

Well, last Saturday night somewhere around 3,000 people, mostly from up-island, drove out to Montauk to watch a local person designated by the Montauk Historical Society pull a switch to all of a sudden bathe the historic, 80-foot tall Montauk Lighthouse in lovely Christmas lights.

It was quite something. In the late afternoon, a whole parade of cars streamed toward Montauk and the Lighthouse to begin to fill the 700-car parking lot adjacent to the Lighthouse grounds. Signs alongside the road for the last six miles from downtown Montauk cheered people along the way, asking them to donate a few dollars toward the upkeep of the Light when they got there. Get your money out, whatever you want.

Police cars with their lights flashing slowed the line of cars down as they got to the Lighthouse so volunteers from the Historical Society, wearing heavy winter coats and knitted caps, could ask people as they approached in their cars to pay whatever they could afford, after which they were allowed in.

The sun hung low on the horizon. The line moved along, and then, at 4:30, 15 minutes before sunset, the gates to the lighthouse grounds opened and the many adults and children large and small streamed in.

During this time, a small party was underway in the Lighthouse itself in what had been in an earlier time the home of the Lighthouse Keeper and his family but which now is a museum of artifacts relating to the Light, including maps, a diorama, the giant Fresnel lighthouse lens that stands 6 feet high, several items from shipwrecks and various important documents, including the order to create the Lighthouse issued by George Washington in 1796.

At 5 p.m., darkness rapidly descended and everyone in the museum walked down through the crowd nearly filling the great Lighthouse lawn to do the pulling-of-the-switch ceremony there at the garage building 200 yards away.

Speeches were made. Sarah Conway and her band sang holiday songs from under a tent, people danced and sang, and then the countdown began and I wandered over to where the switch was. That was my job.

It was a very large switch. The switch plate was as big as one of the garage doors, and the switch itself, a four-by-four piece of wood painted red was attached to the switch plate on a hinge. You pulled it toward the sky to make it operate.

thanked everybody who had made all of this possible. And then, the moment came.

"Ten," the crowd shouted. "Nine. Eight. Seven. Six...."

Was this switch really going to light up the Lighthouse? People looked up at the light and back to the switch.

"Three. Two. One. ZERO!"

And as hard as I could, I pushed the switch up to the ON position and my goodness, the word went out by walkie-talkie from a man standing 10 feet from me to another man in front of the Lighthouse with a real actual electric switch attached to wires and, bingo, the Lighthouse lighted up. Everyone cheered. People shook my hand, clapped me on the back, took pictures. And then, as the cheering died down, Dick White was once again talking over the microphone.

"Wait a minute," he shouted. "There's somebody way up at the top of the Lighthouse, coming out of the glass cabin up there. Why, could it be? It is! It's Santa Claus!!!"

A spotlight shone up to the top of the Lighthouse, and there he was in his red suit, and everybody cheered once again. He too had a microphone.

"Merry Christmas, everybody," he shouted, his deep voice wafting his invocation down over the landscape. What a moment. And then he was gone, through the glass door up there and back inside. Then Conway and her band began a rousing rendition of "Jingle Bells."

What a nice time. 🎅

Seagulls Spoil Shell Recycling Party. What About Wampum?

BY DAN RATTINER

The East Hampton Town Trustees decided this past October to allow people to collect scallop shells where they lay on beaches around town and take them to a big mound at the end of Boat Yard Road on Three Mile Harbor to be dried out in anticipation of being recycled. The recycling would consist of the seashells being spread back among the dunes, reefs and shellfish beds in waters around the town. There, they'd provide the necessary calcium for the growth of marine organisms that eventually would result in a more stable and vibrant sea bottom that could include crabs, mussels, algae, worms, barnacles, eels, small fish and lots of other creatures. The drying out period would have to be about six months. That's how long it would take for the bacteria in the shells abandoned by their owners to cease being toxic.

Locals have been raising a stink about scallop shells

At the time all of this was initially discussed, it was thought that the restaurants should be contacted to see if some of the shells left over after clams casino or mussels marina or oysters Rockefeller could be gathered up and added to the mound.

This has not worked out very well.

For one thing, the town environmentalists nixed the idea of approaching the restaurants, saying that after thinking about it and doing some research, they'd come to the conclusion that there was no way to tell if the restaurants were all buying local or, God forbid, from elsewhere, which would mix up with the indigenous species poorly.

Then the mound out at Boat Yard Road began to stink. The wind carried the stink off to the neighbors, and it also began to attract huge flocks of seagulls, who, excited about finding such a smelly new food source, also left lots of white guano droppings around, which did not mix well with the other stuff. Peter and Mark Mendelman of Seacoast Enterprises, the owners of Three Mile Harbor Marina, spoke at a trustees meeting at the end of November, where Peter said there were seagulls on every piling in his marina at one time, and Mark said the smell from the guano and the rotting seashell pile next door made him want to throw up.

This situation, brought to the trustee's attention last week, resulted in the town revising their plan. They apologized to the Mendelmans, put up signs around the pile and got someone to take charge of keeping the site clean pending their moving all these seashells to a new location at a boat launching ramp at Lazy Point, 10 miles away.

Lost in all this, however, is the story of wampum, another use of seashells. When the white settlers got here, they found the Montaukett Indians were the "bankers" of the more than one dozen Indian tribes on the island plus others in New England. These tribes were buying, selling and swapping and trading wampum, which consisted of noodle-like beads made from polished seashell parts they'd found on the beaches, usually strung on leather strings they wore around their necks and also as belts. Indeed, when the white men first came to the East End, they not only began selling and buying things with wampum, they soon started a high-intensity wampum making operation themselves. In addition, wampum was designated as an official currency for this area.

As there was nothing to stop this from going nuts, the market soon got flooded with wampum and the European settlers soon saw the value of the stuff plummeting and so voted to abandon wampum as a recognized currency.

But why not bring it back? 🐚

This Week's Cover Artist: Max Moran

BY STEPHANIE DE TROY

This week's cover artist, North Fork-based Max Moran, captures the beauty and quiet stillness of a winter scene. A red log cabin and sun-speckled trees lend warmth to a snowy landscape—inviting the viewer into the forest of thin, tall trees flecked with color. Here's what the artist has to say about creating the cover art, titled "Writer's Cabin," artists he admires, and life on the North Fork.

Why is this called the "Writer's Cabin?"

I discovered it in the Catskills, near Millbrook Mountain. I used to go up there—it looked like a place writers might stay, and when I talked to the owner I learned that, yes, writers who wished to remain anonymous stay there. Who knows what great literary works may have happened there?

Did you stay there while you were working on the painting?

We stayed right across from it. The light that comes down the hill after that first snowfall is incredible. There's a fascination with the lines of the trees and the thick. And the cabin, it's man-made but it's still inviting. Plus, it works.

It certainly works with the composition—along with the tracks in the snow and the stone wall.

Those tracks are from a sled. And that's a fieldstone wall in back—they go back to the settlers. Climbing the mountains, you see a lot of them, defining what's yours and what's mine. Some of them are made with flag rock—it's truly an art form how they stay together. A stolen painting I did called, "Olivia's Wall," which was a birthday present for my daughter, was just returned to me this Thanksgiving. Walls have an interesting connotation, really a metaphor. We were separated. A detective with the Southold Police Department recovered it and now my daughter is reunited with her painting.

What is "Writer's Cabin" painted on?

It's oil on linen. I like to work with the canvas, as they say. Paint is applied every which way. I like to let the natural fabric show through. Kind of like a punctuation.

Having begun your career as a painter in the Midwest and now living on the North Fork, how do the two areas compare?

Well, I grew up in Ohio and went back recently. Everything is changing. The distinctive mom-and-pop stores are now replaced by McDonald's, just like Riverhead. I think of Chrissie Hynde's lyrics, "I went back to Ohio, but my city was gone." The North Fork does maintain an agrarian culture, you have the seasons, and it's two minutes to the Sound and two minutes to the bay. It's got a lot of charm.

Some of your paintings are city scenes—so do you go back and forth?

No, I'm mostly here now. But you know, as they say, "you never shake the city loose." I lived there during an interesting period—1991 to 1996. Back then, you could live in the city and scrape by. When still living in the city, I saw that around 12th & 13th Streets, near 3rd Avenue, 6 manhole covers had been turned into 14. They were re-wiring everything in preparation for the high-rises and buying up everything. But change is inevitable. Now out here, it's nice to catch my breath.

Who are some of the artists you admire?

Being from Ohio, I'd have to go with George Bellows, ever since I was in the fifth grade. Every brushstroke carries weight. John Sloan, as well, as a more urban, Ashcan artist. He has atmosphere. I like honest paintings.

What are your outdoor painting workshops like?

I do them once a year, usually. They're called "Pigment & Plein Air" and the chef at Jedediah Hawkins usually fixes a lunch for us, so people have something to work up an appetite for. It's always good to pass something along. We're only here for a short while. Put it out there while you can. 🍷

Max Moran's artwork can be seen at A Mano Osteria & Wine Bar, Mattituck; Jedediah Hawkins Inn, Jamesport; and at his studio in Baiting Hollow. For more info, visit maxmoran.com.

Holiday TV Time with the Fam on Shelter Island

BY SALLY FLYNN

SHELTERED ISLANDER

So how was your Thanksgiving? Mine was great. Whenever my family gets together in a group, I get enough material for four articles.

This year we all convened at my brother Brian Boutcher's house in Sag Harbor. His in-laws, the Pratts, were there. We had all the normal commotion. Mr. Pratt, a gourmet cook, was checking the turkey every 15 minutes with family members cruising through the kitchen asking "Is it done?" Of course, there was a children's table because we don't want those animals eating with us! They still think milk shooting out of someone's nose is funny.

It wouldn't be the holiday season without a fight!

We told old family stories for hours, excessively embellished as the occasion and blood alcohol level demanded. We were all starting to feel very sentimental, missing the family that wasn't there and appreciating the ones that were. Just as the conversation was deteriorating into a bonding "Waltonesque" moment, someone saved us all by suggesting we put on March of the Wooden Soldiers, as we have in the past. So we turned on the TV and only got the WLNG broadcast—over the TV channel! We tried going around the channels to look for the movie, but to no avail. The appropriate thing to do would be to say, "Ah, what the heck, just leave it alone, we'll figure it out later. It's Thanksgiving, we're all here, turn off the TV."

But a malfunctioning TV is a code-red situation in any self-respecting American home. If the plumbing goes, you can go in the yard until the plumber gets there. If the power goes, you can endure it with candles and watching the children play with fire. Inconveniences can be handled, but this was TV.

All the adults not needed in the kitchen assembled in the living room. Failure was not an option. Was it the remote? Does it need batteries? Are all the cables connected and tight? Was the bill paid? Did somebody screw with the menu settings? Has there been any drinking in this room?

Brian got to lay on the floor behind the TV and swear. The couch became Capital Command Central. Karren and Rob took the job of presenting conflicting theories. David spouted off-the-wall ideas from the La-Z-Boy, "Maybe you should turn the set toward Mecca."

It was my role to reinstate suggestions other people had already made. That's really the hardest role in a situation like this because you have to make each suggestion sound like it's a new idea. My daughter took the role of criticizer. She's older now, so it was acceptable to enter the adult realm of television crisis intervention. Plus she's got a real smart mouth. Wonder where she got it from, probably those kids at school. Someone else did a great job of saying "Shut up! We've already tried that!" Thank God we had enough people to make a complete television-crisis intervention team.

After about 45 minutes, some people (the quitters) suggested we forget about it. Besides, they said, the turkey was done. They were subdued by a loud chorus of "But we almost have it!" We were at it for at least an hour, checking connections, going through the menus and turning the set to face Mecca. Finally, just before we would've been forced to make the decision to hold dinner, Brian did something and it was fixed. He wasn't sure exactly what he did that fixed it, and that was perfect. There are some things in life that should maintain a sense of mystery and awe about them. Thanksgiving miracles like spontaneous machine restoration is one of them.

So what did we do next? Well, the turkey dinner—trimmings and all—was set and ready to go, so we turned off the TV and went and had dinner of course! 🍗

Enjoy the Gift of the Ocean Year-Round

BY KELLY LAFFEY

Southampton Village's Main Street was flooded with shoppers over Thanksgiving weekend.

Everyone seemed to agree: This was the busiest off-season weekend in recent memory.

To be clear, Southampton's Black Friday was not mall-like.

Nor was it city-like. But there were sales and definite lines at stores, and unlike in weeks past, it wasn't possible to park your car in front of whatever business you were planning on visiting. The crowds were impressive, and I was happy to see so much activity post-Labor Day.

In between dodging Thanksgiving weekend revelers, I happened upon Flying Point on Main Street and went inside to check out their sales.

Seduced by the idea of being in a surf shop so late in the year, I wandered upstairs to the wetsuits. I standup paddleboard frequently in the summer and try to extend the season as long as possible, but I reluctantly put my board in the garage in late October.

As I stared at the black expanse of neoprene suits in front of me, I began to wonder: Could I become a year-round SUPer?

The Polar Bear Plunge in Southampton is December 13.

There's nothing I hate more than the cold. There's nothing I like better than the ocean. While I visit the beach year-round, the chilly weather definitely prevents me from enjoying it as much as I do in the summer. (Sometimes, I drive to Little Plains Beach during my lunch breaks and pay bills or schedule a doctor's appointment over the phone while staring at the ocean. It definitely makes bland errands far less arduous.)

But, like the surprise number of Southampton visitors who opted to head east in the offseason, I was beginning to think that there's no reason why I shouldn't take advantage of water sports when the temperature dips, too.

After some independent research aided by the friendly sales reps at Flying Point, I narrowed down my wetsuit choices. For those who are also interested in mid-winter ocean dips, wetsuits come in varying degrees of thickness, measured in millimeters. Thickness is denoted using two numbers. The first number indicates the thickness of the material covering the torso, and the second represents the thickness of the material covering the extremities. This enables your core to stay warm while allowing better flexibility and range of motion in your legs and arms. Recommended suit thickness—and the addition of boots, gloves and a hood—goes up as the temperature drops. To give a reference point, the average water temperature out here hits the low-50s by December, at which point a minimum 4/3 full suit is necessary.

Though I love the idea of SUPing with a snowfall, the reality is that I'm probably not going to be out there when the temps drop below freezing. Rather, this will allow me to extend my standup paddleboarding shoulder season. Maybe I'll stay out of the water in January and February, but March and April are now viable options.

However, until the wetsuit is purchased, I'll stay content with my annual December dip in the Atlantic. The 11th annual Polar Bear Plunge is this weekend—December 13 at Coopers Beach in Southampton at 10 a.m. Funds benefit Human Resources of the Hamptons, a Southampton-based organization that helps community members in need.

Costume or bathing suit-clad revelers gather at the beach—rain, snow or sleet—and jump in. It's exhilarating, and an amazing antidote to the shorter winter days. The best part may be the survivors' tent, which is stocked with warm soups, donuts, hot dogs and, just outside, a massive bonfire. One tip to those planning on going in: Put something on your feet. You won't believe how painful it is for numb feet to walk on sand.

They say that salt water is good for the soul. Feed yours in more way than one this weekend. 🐻

Bobby Collins Takes Riverhead December 13

BY KELLY LAFFEY

A one-on-one interview with Bobby Collins is like going to a personal comedy show. The stand-up comedian, who performs upward of 200 shows each year, will make a pit stop at Riverhead's Suffolk Theater on December 13.

Born in New York but a resident of Santa Monica for the past 25 years, Collins is thankful to return to Long Island, as the rest of the world is full of morons, he says. "I like Long Island," he continues. "[Long Islanders] wear their hearts on their sleeves, and they look in people instead of at them." He often references geographical stereotypes in his comedy—how people who grow up in various states are different from each other—because he finds them to be true. "People like to know about what's going on in different parts [of the U.S.]," he says.

Active in comedy since the 1980s, Collins has become known for his stand-up routines. "People say to me, 'Bobby, you never disappoint. Every year you come back with new material,'" he notes. Collins draws his routines from current events, tailoring each show to the area in which he's performing. The goal of his comedy is "to educate, to entertain. You can change the way people look at things by making them laugh," he says. "It's not Republican or Democrat, it's what's right."

This will not be Collins' first time on the East End, as he used to perform during the summer at the Southampton Inn. More recently, he's taken the stage at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theater as a part of the summer Comedy Club. Collins returns to New York often. He spent Thanksgiving weekend in the city, where he and his wife and three kids, now college-age, took in quintessential New York activities like eating at family style Italian restaurant Carmine's, and seeing the Broadway productions of Kinky Boots and Motown.

Collins seemed destined for a career in comedy, as he was named after his father's favorite comedian, Bob Hope. But Collins wasn't always on the stand-up route. He first worked in fashion, and he made his way up to become the Vice President of Calvin Klein. He left the position to pursue comedy and soon found himself working alongside such legends as Jerry Seinfeld and Jay Leno.

As his stand-up routines became more popular, he performed in non-traditional venues, opening for musical legends Cher and Frank Sinatra, and landing a gig at the White House 18 years ago. The White House routine earned him an international tour entertaining U.S. embassies abroad. Collins has since been to 75 countries, and lists China, Bangladesh and the Philippines among the cooler venues. Collins arrives in each country a day or two before the gig, giving him time to soak up the local culture to use in his routines. In the Philippines, he found irony in one headline that detailed the use of rescue dogs. "I read in the paper that they use rescue dogs [to find people during natural disasters], but the dogs must be thinking, 'chances are, if we find these people, they're going to eat us!'"

Though Collins now resides in California, he loves New York and often uses the differences between his two homes as fodder for his comedy. "Here, it's a quicker pace. Like, the red light is just a suggestion... [In Santa Monica,] the biggest thing I'm afraid of is when I'm walking the dogs, they're taking a dump and people go, 'excuse me, are you going to clean that up?' [But in New York], rats wear leather jackets."

The Suffolk Theater audience, however, may have more to live up to than a California audience. Think before you laugh.

"People in New York, on Long Island, have more [intelligence] in their fingernail than anyone else does [in their whole bodies]," deadpans Collins.

Bobby Collins performs at Suffolk Theater, 118 East Main Street, Riverhead at 8 p.m. Doors, bar and restaurant open at 6:30. Tickets are $49. For more information, visit suffolktheater.com or call 631-727-4343.

Nutcracker “Sweets” Light up the East End

BY KELLY LAFFEY

It wouldn't be the holidays without a performance of The Nutcracker, and a number of productions grace the East End winter calendar. Character names and select details may change, but the basic plotline tells the same, beloved tale.

"Nutcracker, for many adults and children, is an event that defines the tradition and magic of the season," says Sara Jo Strickland, the director of the Hampton Ballet Theatre School. The timeless show means even more for the people involved in the production. Many ballet schools perform the show annually, and the desire to land certain roles instills a work ethic in kids as they continue to dance from year to year. "They look forward, with great excitement, to performing the next role 'up' and they may wait years for their dream role," continues Strickland. "Therefore, it keeps them focused on how to get there, and they work hard in classes and rehearsals to reach their goals."

With a score by famed Russian composer Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky, The Nutcracker is the story of Clara, who receives a nutcracker from her godfather

Drosselmeyer on Christmas Eve. Later that night, Clara sneaks down into the living room and helps the Nutcracker win a magical battle against the evil Mouse King. The toy transforms into a prince and leads Clara through a snowflake-filled pine forest into the land of sweets, ruled by the benevolent Sugar Plum Fairy. Various candies dance for Clara and the Nutcracker Prince in thanks. As the ballet ends, audience members are left to question whether Clara's experience was a dream or reality.

To get into the holiday spirit, check out these Nutcrackers on the East End:

The Hampton Ballet Theatre School

at Guild Hall, 158 Main Street, East Hampton

The sixth-annual production of the Hampton Ballet Theatre School's The Nutcracker will run at Guild Hall from December 12-14. Kids from ages 4-18 participate in this traditional take on the classic ballet. For more information, call 631-237-4810 or visit hamptonballettheatreschool.com

Peconic Ballet Theatre

at WHBPAC, 76 Main Street, Westhampton Beach

The annual production of The Nutcracker is the culmination of a 12-week residency program with Dancecore and features students and professional dancers at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. The show runs December 13-14. For more info, visit whbpac.org or peconicballettheatre.org.

Seiskaya Ballet at the Staller Center at Stony Brook University Staller Center, 100 Nicolls Road, Stony Brook

One of Long Island's most lavish productions of the ballet returns to the Staller Center at Stony Brook University from December 19-22. Choreographed by the famous Valia Seiskaya, this show has been crafted by acclaimed artists and dancers from all over the world. For more information, visit nutcrackerballet.com.

Dance Studio 3's "Mixed Nuts" Dance Show

at Bay Street Theater, 1 Bay Street, Sag Harbor

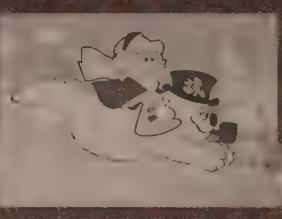

In a twist on the traditional ballet, Dance Studio 3 presents Mixed Nuts, where The Nutcracker meets The Grinch with hilarious effect. The show incorporates a variety of dance styles—tap, jazz, lyrical and hip-hop. Mixed Nuts runs from December 19-20. For more information, visit dancestudio3.com or call 631-537-3008.

A Celebrated Brisket to Celebrate Hanukkah

Hanukkah begins on December 16, and few dishes capture the tradition of family and food that's so much a part of the Festival of Lights like brisket. To make this year's celebration truly special, renowned New York City meat purveyor and Sagaponack resident Scott Solasz, VP of Master Purveyors—which specializes in fresh hanging USDA prime beef, both wet and dry-aged, and provides meat for such renowned clients as The Four Seasons, Bryant & Cooper Steak House, Peter Luger Steak House and others—shares the brisket recipe that generations of his family have enjoyed, hoping it brings joy to you and yours as well.

"This Savory Brisket recipe is a family fave my mother, Rose, has made for years and that I have updated with a few new flavors like smoked paprika, Sir Kensington's Spiced Ketchup and a dash of Heinz 'Pepper Effect' Apple Vinegar," says Solasz, who has been working alongside his father (and company founder), Sam, since 1978.

"I make it in a Dutch oven—the longer it cooks, the better," Solasz adds. "Use a 5.5 pound 'first cut' brisket to serve up to eight Hanukkah guests."

Solasz Family Savory Brisket Recipe for Hanukkah

One (5 1/2 -pound) beef brisket, thick-cut
2 tablespoon Spanish smoked paprika
2 teaspoons of basil
2 teaspoons smoked kosher salt
3 teaspoons tellicherry black pepper
3 medium onions, sliced

The Masters: Scott Solasz, Sam Solasz and Mark Solasz

4 cloves garlic, peeled, halved
2 cups of Sir Kensington's Spiced Ketchup
2 cups dry red wine
2 cups water

Prep Time: 9 minutes
Cook Time: 180 minutes

1. Preheat oven to 325°.
2. Rinse brisket. Place in Dutch oven or a roasting pan.
3. Rub Spanish smoked paprika, basil, smoked salt and a healthy amount of tellicherry black pepper into the meat.
4. Scatter onions and garlic over meat.
5. In a medium bowl, mix ketchup, wine and water. Pour over brisket.
6. Cover the brisket in the Dutch oven (or if using a roasting pan cover with aluminum foil, tenting so that the foil does not touch the meat)
7. Bake at 325° for 3 hours, or until a digital instant-read thermometer inserted into the center of the brisket reads 190° for well done.

Serve with a roasted garlic cauliflower mash and a nice Châteauneuf-du-Pape. 🍷

Holiday Treats, Hampton Eats

BY AJI JONES

Everyone's been raving about the Peconic Bay scallops everywhere they're served and rightly so. But when the season is over there are still a number of delish reasons to dine at RACE LANE in East Hampton. Chief among them in our "Hamptons Epicure" columnist Stacy Dermont's considered opinion is the Portobello Antipasto with local favorite, Good Water Farm's micro basil, shaved Parmesan and balsamic vinegar. She describes the dish as "so fabulously velvety and savory." Race Lane, 31 Race Lane, East Hampton, 631-324-5022, racelanerestaurant.com

LA FONDITA in Amagansett is open for lunch and dinner Sunday, Wednesday and Thursday 11:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Friday and Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Daily specials include, Wednesday: chile rubbed chicken tacos with refried beans, rice and ranchero salsa; Thursday: chipotle chicken tacos with refried beans, rice, lettuce queso fresco and crème; Friday: roasted poblano peppers stuffed with cheese in salsa roja, served with rice, refried beans, salad and hand-made torillas; and Saturday: roasted marinated pork tacos served with avocado salsa and pineapple. 631-267-8800. lafondita.net.

INDIAN WELLS TAVERN in Amagansett is open for lunch and dinner every day from 11:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Lunch highlights include: quesadillas stuffed with a blend of cheeses with a choice of chicken, spinach, chicken and grilled onions or steak and grilled onions; and steamed mussels in a white wine sauce with fries. Dinner menu highlights include: ravioli stuffed with mushrooms, ricotta cheese, herbs and tossed in a brown butter sauce; 8-ounce filet mignon topped with Gorgonzola cheese and served with mashed potatoes and vegetables; and seafood pasta with lobster meat, shrimp and scallops tossed with penne in a sun dried tomato cream sauce. 631-267-0400. indianwellstavern.com.

THE PATIO AT 54 MAIN in Westhampton is open for dinner Tuesday through Thursday from 4 to 9 p.m., Friday and Saturday from 4 to 10 p.m. and Sunday and Monday from 4 to 8:30 p.m. Select menu highlights include: grilled chicken breast with Balsamic onions, pan-fried potatoes and demi glaze; roasted Long Island duck with Brussels sprouts and blackberry reduction; and pork chop with white bean mash and maple glaze. 631-288-0100. thepatiowhb.com.

LA VOLPE in Center Moriches serves lunch and dinner Tuesday through Sunday from noon to 9:30 p.m. Lunch highlights include: shrimp scampi sautéed in butter, garlic and white wine scampi sauce; chicken breast sautéed with mushrooms, onions and marsala sauce; and grilled salmon on a bed of sautéed spinach and lobster cream sauce. Dinner highlights include: breaded chicken breast filled with ham, provolone and mozzarella, with creamy Dijon sauce; filet mignon au poivre, grilled 8-ounce steak with brandy cream sauce, fresh peppercorns, white mushrooms and mashed potatoes; and potato gnocchi, crumbled sausage, red and yellow peppers in a plum tomato sauce. 631-874-3819. lavalperestaurant.net.

Hamptons Real Estate by the Numbers

BY WALLACE FIGG

Numbers always drive and define the real estate market, and for the past 12 months in the Hamptons and on the North Fork those numbers have been telling an impressive story. Whether it's been record-setting sales or massive movements in sales volume, we've seen a steady stream of noteworthy numerical events that, with only a few weeks left in 2014, continue to tell an engaging story. Celebrity sales and haunted homes, nine-figure asking prices and newsworthy new listings are all part of this week's numbers game on the East End.

$140,000,000: Asking price for what is now the most expensive home listed for sale in the Hamptons (and all of New York, for that matter), the historic Briar Patch estate on Georgica Pond in East Hampton. Barely six months after East Hampton found itself with the record for most expensive home sale price ever in the United States (you recall that $147 million deal at 60 Further Lane back in May, don't you?), this 11.2-acre property boasting 1,156 feet of water frontage went on the market, listed with Peter M. Turino of Brown Harris Stevens. Along with the expansive water views and rolling lawn, there's a four-bedroom guest house built in the style of the main home itself, all of which is why this listing is 56 times...

$2,498,700, the median home value in East Hampton, which is...

$340,000 more than Oscar winner Renée Zellweger paid for her East Hampton home back in 2003, an investment that roughly doubled when she sold that property last month after listing it for...

$4.45 million, which barely kept it on the market for a month. Zellweger bought the house at 30 Egypt Lane for a reported $2.15 million and listed it in October with Linda Haugevik of Douglas Elliman Real Estate. The 0.91-acre gated property features a 2,000-square-foot renovated farmhouse with four bedrooms and three baths and a two-car garage with a loft, plus a new gunite pool—and, allegedly, a poltergeist. In 2003, the New York Post reported that a previous owner, Manhattan furniture designer John Mascheroni, said the spirit of an elderly woman resided there. "She loved to play tricks," the Post was told by Mascheroni, who lived there from 1974 to 1982 and identified the poltergeist as the ghost of past owner Lillian Worthington. That's an impressive amenity, but how does it compare to...

5 en suite bedrooms, which you'll find in the $29 million, 8,500-square-foot home at 210 Meadow Lane in Southampton for sale by socialite Janna Bullock. Of course, if you'd prefer to be at the other end of Meadow Lane, you could purchase...

Renée Zellweger sells.

2170, the address of another home just put on the market by Bullock (both are listed with Anthony Cerio and Michael Natter of Brown Harris Stevens). This one's a bit smaller, at 3,500 square feet, and it will also only run you $22 million, or you could look into some southern properties with Hamptons ties just...

1,087.95 miles away, in Manalapan, Florida, where South Fork developer Joe Farrell, the New York Post reports, is building seven waterfront mansions. The new properties, just south of Palm Beach, are reportedly worth a combined $100 million and count the likes of Tony Robbins among the neighbors. Farrell also reportedly built a little something for himself: Sandcastle South, a 9,000-square-foot home on the ocean, which seems like a lovely wintertime retreat from his...

17,000-square-foot Sandcastle in Bridgehampton, which has been rented by the likes of Beyoncé and Jay-Z for summertime fun and, according to Business Insider, rented for one week this past summer for...

$300,000. Yes, it's already time to start talking about summer rentals for 2015! 🏡
